The PrintKey screen will pop up, and your entire screen will be shown in display window:

• click on Get Rectangular Area button i, this will allow you to "crop" the area you want to print.

Your screen will return to the one you wanted to print from, and your pointer will change to an + click & drag the + from the top left of the area you want printed, to the bottom right a staggered line will appear around the area you selected ...

and when you let go of the mouse button the PrintKey screen will pop up again and the area that you selected will display in the main window.

- if this area is what you wanted to print:

• click the Print key

- if this is the area you wanted to cut & paste to another document:

• go to other document and Paste (right click on mouse, or File > Paste, or \square)

Important note: To use PrintKey again, it must be closed, then clicked on again from system's tray.
